One of the more serious problems was property management. DOE s contractors were missing over $700, 000 worth of property. An additional $2.09 million worth of property on hand was not in the contractors inventory data bases and millions of dollars worth of equipment was being stored outside, exposed the elements, and literally rusting and corroding away. Property management was simply not a priority with Doe or its contractors. Here we are more than a decade later. And the property management problems at the Strategic Petroleum Reserve may have improved, but in today s hearing the Subcommittee will once again hear about millions of dollars worth of government-owned property that is missing. Once again, we will hear about millions of dollars worth of government-owned property that is literally rusting and corroding away. And once again, we will hear evidence that the management of property purchased with taxpayers money is simply not a priority with Doe or its contractors. DOE s fifty management and operations (MO) contractors are currently responsible for $11.5 billion worth of personal property from personal computers to automobiles to one-of-a-kind scientific or nuclear weapons production equipment. Additional billions of dollars worth of property have passed through their hands over the last decade. And untold amounts of property- -apparently in the hundreds of millions of dollars- are unaccounted for, lost,...
